

SAM FOX SCHOOL OF DESIGN & VISUAL ARTS

College of Art and College of Architecture Undergraduate Study Abroad Programs Offered by the Sam Fox School

Overview

The Sam Fox School offers undergraduate study abroad programs that draw on the rich traditions as well as the contemporary design strengths of carefully selected locations. The programs are led by faculty from the Sam Fox School. Each program leverages its unique location by inviting local artists, designers, and architects to serve as instructors and visiting lecturers; incorporating local sites into course assignments and studio projects; and arranging numerous excursions to nearby sites and cities. All Sam Fox School programs work hand-in-hand with the School's curriculum to ensure that students can study abroad while earning required degree credits. Students must maintain a 3.0 GPA to qualify for all study abroad programs.

Florence

The Sam Fox School Florence Semester Program offers undergraduate students the opportunity to study during in Florence, Italy, the birthplace of Western cultural modernity. Architecture student study in Florence in either their junior or senior year, while Art students travel in their junior year only. Classes make use of the rich artistic and cultural environment, urban and architectural history, and contemporary aspects of Florence, as well as other locations in Italy.

The Florence Summer Program provides an interdisciplinary learning environment within the framework of art, architecture, and art history in Florence. This program is an intensive two-month, ten-credit program in studio art/architecture and art history for students of all levels. The program is open to Sam Fox School and Non-Sam Fox School students.

Summer Travel Drawing Program

Rising juniors and seniors from the Colleges of Architecture and Art may participate in the Summer Travel Drawing Program. This three-week, three-credit program takes students through significant European or South American cities in a directed curriculum of urban and building analysis and appreciation. This program is offered every other summer.

Berlin

Sommerakademie is primarily a seminar-based course of art research and practice designed for students in the Graduate School of Art and rising seniors in the College of Art. Students receive three credits for this course, which explores several modes of creative practice in relation to the material, social, and political conditions in Berlin, one of the world's most important contemporary art centers. This program is offered every other summer.

Finances

Tuition and fees will be billed directly to students through their WUSTL accounts, where credits and financial aid will be adjusted. Students are responsible for their own airfare.
